John Gardecki Gives Recital Tomorrow

By Bill Legg

The Music Club of Loyola College will sponsor a piano recital tomorrow night in Cohn Hall at 8:30 p.m. John Gardecki, a 19-year-old Loyola junior, will be the featured pianist. John, a physics major, has been studying music for the past 11 years under the capable direction of Dorothea Artmann. He has also studied related subjects with Mr. Otto Artmann.

Program Sample

The program promises to be light and varied, as several favorites are included. Among these are Brahms' "Intermezzo in B-Flat Minor," Chopin's "Prelude in A Major," and "Malaguena" by Lecuona.

Child Prodigy

Ever since his first complete recital at the age of 14, John has been the recipient of numerous awards and honors in music.

When he was 16, John was the only person in the state of Maryland to have ever won seven consecutive honorable mentions and seven certificates of national merit from the National Federation of Music Clubs. He has also won two scholarships from the Baltimore Symphony.

Several Concerts

Within the last year he has won the Baltimore Symphony's youth talent contest and has appeared with the orchestra as soloist at the Lyric Theater. He has also appeared twice as soloist with the Gettysburg Symphony Orchestra under the direction of Dr. William Sebastian Hart.

John has also played at the International Navigation Congress and at the Governor's mansion at Annapolis and several other occasions.

Admission Free

The concert is open to the public and all are invited to attend. There will be no charge for admission.

Pianist John Gardecki will play at the piano recital tomorrow evening.

Tenth Annual Military Ball To Feature Civil War Theme

On the evening of November 18, 1961 the Annual Military Ball of Loyola College will be held on campus from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. The theme of the ball is the Civil War, and the name of the band, appropriately enough, is "The Johnny Rebs." Also included in the price of the ticket, which is $5.00, are a favor for your date and refreshments.

All alumni and present members of the student body are invited to attend the ball, which is sponsored by the Scabbard and Blade. Uniforms are to be worn by all R.O.T.C. cadets, while tuxedos are required for those gentlemen not engaged in military activities; gowns are to be worn by the ladies. Those attending the ball are asked not to give corsages to their dates. Also no cadet is to wear his name tag, and caps and overcoats are to be left in the car.

Ceremonies Shortened

This year the mid-ball activities will be considerably shorter. In fact, the entire ceremony will take only twenty minutes and will consist of the crowning of the queen and the presentation of her court.

This year's ball will be headed by John Q. Feller who is ably assisted by Cadet Col. Eugene Nelka.

Outstanding Event

The Military Ball has long been an outstanding social event, and the tenth annual one should not be the exception. As usual, Mass will be said in the chapel following the dance.

Three Freshmen File Petitions For Frosh Presidency

Edward Slawski, Chairman of the Election Committee, has announced that the petitions for Freshmen Class offices are in, but all petitions have not as yet been approved by the Dean of Studies.

3 For Pres.

The three freshmen who filed petitions for President are Anthony Miller, Joseph Colly, and Patrick Creaney.

William A. Hohn, William W. Mutcherling, William E. Scholtes, Raymond F. Ackerman, and Michael J. Giangrandi filed petitions for Student Council Representative.

The seven petitions for Vice-President include Thomas J. O'Connell, Bisohp F. Baker, Bernard J. Vondersmith, Melvin Rosen, Stuart Schoenfeld, Vincent J. Petroniero, and David P. Kennedy.

Martin Pialachowski filed the only petition for Secretary.

The candidates running for Treasurer are Charles Cronin, Richard Anderson, John J. Mitcherling, and James F. Coyle.

The list of approved candidates will appear in the Greyhound.

Loyola Glee Club Plans Loyola Night Program

By Dave Schroeder

Probably the first chance the student body will have to see their Glee Club will be on Loyola Night, November 26. This is an opportunity that should not be missed, since the club will sing several songs in the spirit of the evening to entertain the audience.

Some propitious innovations in both membership and management show that the Loyola songsters will have a good year. The increase in the number of singers will help the club's volume and appearance and will allow it to sing even more diverse types of music than the club has performed in past years.

Fr. Smardon To Moderate

The Glee Club has a new moderator this year. Rev. Fr. Smardon S.J. will preside and advise the club for the '62 school year. Upon receiving his new position, Father said that he is pleased to be moderator and that he anticipates a successful season for the club.

Excellent Coaching

A great advantage that the Glee Club shares with four other local clubs is the direction of Miss Virginia Reinecke. Miss Reinecke is an accomplished pianist and a veritable genius musically. Her efforts have produced a fine group of veteran singers and will inevitably produce many more.

Tenative Engagements

Loyola has invitations to perform at schools and hospitals in the vicinity and will perform out of state. The club has its uniforms now and only needs ashtrays and pencils to launch their campaign.

Spot News

Barber Poll

The Management Club has announced that at least 90% of the student vote is needed to consider the possibility of having a barber shop on campus. Under such a system the maximum price of haircuts would be one dollar. The student body is requested to fill out a ballot which can be obtained between 9 a.m. and 2:30 p.m. in front of the Campus Shop.

Dramatic Society Presents

The Loyola College Dramatic Society will present G.B. Shaw's "Caesar and Cleopatra" in Cohn Hall on Friday and Saturday evenings, November 24 and 25.

Debating Society

Last Saturday, November 4, the Debating Society participated in a tournament at Navy. The team had a split record, winning three and losing three.

Editorial

Booked Solid

In the editorial of April 28, 1961, we suggested that the next addition to Loyola be a library. We recall this suggestion in order to point out the importance of a good library in a college; and thereby, to remind the students of the essential part that the library plays in their educational careers.

As freshmen and sophomores, students generally become familiar with the library as a source for their research, and as a bank containing the books which are required to be read for some subjects. In Junior year, when the students become more serious, the true value of the library becomes evident to them. It is visited not only through obligation; but also out of entertainment or curiosity (regarding magazines and newspapers) and interest in supplementary knowledge.

As evidence of the importance of libraries to universities, most graduate schools make one of their selling items the scope and intensity of their libraries. It is an item the value of which applicants should well be familiar.

Concluding this editorial, we would just like to point out the fact that Loyola's present library is a fine one. It contains approximately 53,000 volumes, and should be one prime source of our reference material. Remember, student familiarization is student education.

the Watchdog

We can't help but to muse over the fact that most of the lawns around campus are now displaying small "Keep of the Grass" signs. It is really surprising to us to think that there are people in the Administration who think that mature college students don't have enough sense to do something as obvious as this. Since we don't think that our students have to be reminded of a simple thing like keeping off the grass, we feel that these signs are unnecessary. Besides, they are dangerous. We've fallen over three of them already!!!

Ed Conery tells us that the thing which he has been wearing to school everyday is called a trench coat. We weren't exactly sure of that fact before, but we sort of guessed that it came from some kind of hole in the ground!!!

John Feller tells us that this year's "Military Ball" should be a real swinging affair. Although we hate to steal his thunder, we've been saying for years that some of the military personnel should swing. Preferably from a piece of rope!!!

Anyone interested in a good-sized belly laugh on the Army might check the sign on the Dell Building bulletin board. Quote: "Bring money for patrons and sponsors along with money for tickets to drill Wednesday." We knew that the military was in need of money, but didn't think that they'd start selling tickets for drill in order to get it. Besides, they didn't even mention the fact that there is "standing room only."

Students should be preparing their skits, impersonations, and pantomimes, for Loyola Nite, Wednesday, Nov. 22nd. Tryouts will be heard from 7 p.m. to 10 p.m. on the Monday and Tuesday evenings preceding the show. Anyone interested should contact Fr. Scanlan.

Jim Clarke's newest invention is a writing implement which uses mud as ink and it is called a "pig-pen." We don't know if this product will sell, but figure that a lot of people around here can use one—Especially those who are always being told to "get the lead out."

Bird's Beat

Well, "Bird" watchers, it seems that a few people thought that the quiz in this publication last week was a little tricky. This week the quiz is somewhat easier; this will enable more students to become official "Bird" watchers. Last week the first three people to see Bird with the correct answers to the quiz became the first official "Bird" watchers. These men were Bob Galster--Junior, Tom Himmel--Junior, and Ronnie Meyers--Senior. This week "Bird" wants to see at least one Freshman and one Sophomore become a "word man." Just because upper classmen are older does not mean that they are smarter. So let's go underclassmen, and show a little spirit.

This week's quiz really isn't that hard. If you read three or four of the words this week the quiz will be a pushover. Just match the words in the first column to their synonyms in the second column; write the answers in the space provided; see the "Bird"; and you will be an official "Bird" watcher. It is as simple as that.

Here is this week's quiz:

- | | |
|-----------------|--------------|
| A. magniloquent | 1. to anger |
| B. arduous | 2. overjoyed |
| C. rescind | 3. difficult |
| D. incense | 4. boastful |
| E. ecstasy | 5. to cancel |

Place your answers here—

If you did not know all the words, check the posters Monday for the answers.

The Past Revisited:

Loyola's Rose Bowl Bid

Because of the reception given to the article "Houndsight" two weeks ago, Assistant Features Editor Jim Burns has gone back to the Christmas Issue of 1931 and chosen this article as a memorable piece of news to recall. To wit:

"We've decided that there ain't no justice. Why should Southern California and Tulane play in the Tournament of Roses when Loyola could beat either of them? Don't laugh. Here's the 'proof' by the method of comparing scores.

Notre Dame First Victim

Army beats Notre Dame by 12 points. Harvard defeated Army 14-13, and then lost to Yale 3-0. This puts Yale 4 points ahead of Army and, consequently, 16 points better than Notre Dame. Yale now comes along and beats Holy Cross 6-0, giving Holy Cross 10 markers over Notre Dame. The Crusaders nosed out Loyola by 2 points, and Loyola comes out 8 ahead of N. D.

Easy Going Now

After that close game with the Irish let's get on with the easier games on our schedule. Notre Dame beat Navy 20-0 and we find Loyola 28 big counters ahead of the Sailors. Maryland pulled a 6-0 surprise on Navy, and then came right along and tied Kentucky, resulting in a 22 point margin over Kentucky for Loyola. The Colonels then popped up with a tie against Tennessee and Tenn. beat Alabama by 25 points. Check those figures and see if Loyola isn't 47 points ahead of Alabama. Tulane and Alabama both trampled on poor 'il Mississippi, but 'bama's total was 18 points more than Tulane's. Adding Loyola's 47 points over Alabama, and Alabama's advantage over Tulane in the Mississippi game, we find that Loyola is 65 points stronger than Tulane.

Sweeping the Country

Loyola beat Navy by 28 points in the last paragraph, and Southern Methodist has now beaten the Admirals by 6 points. As a result, Loyola comes out 12 points over S. M. U. St. Mary's beat S. M. U. only 7-0 and that makes Loyola 15 markers stronger than St. Mary's. The Gael stepped up with a 12-6 win over Southern California and Loyola is boosted up to 21 points above the Trojans.

Just in case there are a couple of teams not accounted for, let's wander around the country a bit. Tulane, beaten by 65 points by Loyola was 19 tallies better than Vanderbilt and Vandy beat Ohio State by 5 points, making the Greyhounds 84 stronger than Vandy and 89 points better than the buckeyes. Ohio State shocked Michigan bested Wisconsin by 16 points. Up to now, Loyola is better than 102 points ahead of Michigan, and 118 more powerful than Wisconsin. The Badgers beat Purdue by 7 points, and Purdue whipped Northwestern 7-0. The Greyhounds come out 125 points better than Purdue, and 132 better than Northwestern, and consequently, could have won the Rose Bowl.

Features reporter Dave Schroeder checks the Greyhound morgue for leads on past news articles.

Italy has always been noted for its distinctive shape--geographically and otherwise. This characteristic has also been perceived in its products-- especially those of the female variety. Shape has always provoked man's interest, e.g., the shape of fine automobiles and of fine young ladies, not necessarily in that order. Recently, there was a motion picture which combined the two above-mentioned elements with a very favorable result. This picture was "Come September."

The interest of the audience is whetted by a series of shots of a brand new Rolls Royce convertible flying through the streets of Italy. It is sustained by a rather curvacious Italian import, exported under the name of Lollabrigida and some Made in U.S.A.'s, such as Sandra Dee.

The plot revolves around a valet de chambre, Maurice, who under the inalienable rules of free-enterprise decides he would rather be a maitre de palace. Maurice, (Walter Slezak) turns his employer's (Rock Hudson's) villa into a pasch tourist spot, La Dulce Vista. Hudson, who uses his plush villa for only one month of the year, arrives early to upset his valet's pastry cart. He finds that his cherished privacy is being violated by seven women, six young lovelies and a house mother- who are making use of his marble pillared palace as a hotel. Hudson's attempt to seal good-neighbor relations with Gina Lollabrigida are continually thwarted by the House-Mother. Gina finds warm milk much less tasteful than champagne. Just as Rock succeeds in making the Americans vanish, the chaperone slips on a champagne cork and winds up in traction. Rock then becomes father protector for the young ladies but his job is complicated by the arrival of Bobby Darin. Darin plays a pre-med student who decides to practice his bed-side manner on Sandra Dee. Hudson's fatherly advice succeeds not only in protecting the girl but also in alienating Gina. The conclusion, however, finds the sealing of another good-will pact.

STICKS AND STONES

Last Friday, the students of Loyola College were given the opportunity of hearing Mass in the Byzantine Rite in English, an opportunity given them only once each year. Yet, despite the rarity of the occasion, many remarks expressive of gladness that the ceremony was at last over were quite audible as the students left the chapel. This writer does not agree with these sentiments, but he does recognize the existence of a reason for them: it is difficult for one to appreciate a ceremony over an hour in length when he is unaware of what is happening before them.

The purpose of this annual event is to bring to the students an appreciation and understanding of the Byzantine liturgy. To accomplish this, the administration, this year, had Fr. Wilcock S.J., of the Byzantine Rite give a lecture on the liturgy, the day before the Mass itself (which lecture was very poorly attended by Loyola students, as usual). They also passed out literature on the liturgy in general. Yet, despite the lecture, despite the literature, despite the yellow-covered leaflets (which quite a few students did not receive), it was quite obvious that the students did not know when to stand, in short, how to assist at the Byzantine Mass. As a result, the students did not and could not derive the maximum benefit from this too frequent a ceremony.

One answer to the problem seems quite simple and reasonable. Every year, the administration ought to have each theology teacher devote one of his classes (in each section) during the week preceeding the ceremony to the Byzantine Rite. Let him go through the ceremony, explaining at least what each part of the liturgy is, and what the conduct of the congregation should be during each part. Thus, the students will be better prepared to assist in the liturgy, and the administration's purpose in having the Mass each year will be fulfilled. Besides this, the beautiful rites of the Byzantine Church will then make a more favorable and a more lasting impression on the minds of the students, and give them a greater appreciation of the beauty which they put forth.

GREYHOUND SPORTS

by Tom Kenney

This year, Loyola College is sponsoring two athletic events especially worthy of note. They are the Invitational Basketball and the Loyola Invitational Crosscountry Tournaments. The latter will be held tomorrow afternoon here at Evergreen. Although this crosscountry race is always an exciting event, interest will be at the boiling point tomorrow for several reasons. First, Rick Frampton will defend his title against the strongest field ever assembled for this contest. Secondly, the Hound harriers will have another crack at Mt. St. Mary's, the only team to defeat them this season. So come out tomorrow, both to enjoy a very interesting sporting experience, and to lend moral support to your Hound harriers.

Ticket Plans

Ticket plans have been announced for the Invitational Basketball Tournament, to be held on the nights of December 29th and 30th. All seats will be reserved and all student tickets must be purchased in advance. For Loyola students, tickets will cost $1.00 a piece per night and each student may purchase two tickets per night at that price. However, there is a package deal for Loyola students who want to attend both nights. They may buy a ticket for each night at $.75 per ticket. Two additional tickets, one for each night, may be purchased at the same price ($.75) under the package plan. Tickets will cost $1.50 a piece for other than Loyola students and may be purchased on the nights of the games provided the game is not sold out.

Hound Basketball Team Holds Practice Scrimmage

The Hound Hoopsters met their first outside competition last week when they traveled to Chester, Pa. to battle the Pennsylvania Military College. The Hounds had a rough time unwinding at the start of the contest, but as the scrimmage progressed, both teams more or less evened out. Tony Torba showed a definite improvement at his position of center, especially off the boards. Tony also appears to be coming up to his potential with his outside shots, and he will have to bear the brunt of the rebounding gap left by the graduation of Ed Murn. John Kilkenny showed improvement on his floor game and shooting, and may possibly be battling for a starting berth. Charlie O'Donnell looked good in this pre-season scrimmage and showed signs of taking over the job of floor general, calling the plays for the team.

The team will play 12 home games this season; season tickets for these games can be acquired by students free, upon presentation of their registration card. Besides the regular season games, Loyola will sponsor the Loyola Invitational in December. Ticket plans for the Invitational Tourney are listed in today's "Greyhound Sports" column, page 4, column 1.

X-Country Tourney Set For Tomorrow

Tomorrow, November 11, at 2:00, Loyola will play host to the northern division of the M-D Conference for the fourth annual Loyola Invitational Crosscountry Meet.

Defending Champs

This year's defending individual champ is Loyola's own, Rick Frampton. Last year Rick set a new record for this fall classic with a flashy 16:02.4. Frampton will be seeking his 17th straight collegiate victory.

Former Hound grappler, Charlie Carey, returns to Evergreen to become new wrestling coach.

He has been undefeated throughout his two season career as a Hound harrier.

The defending team champion is Mt. St. Mary's. It is thought that American University, by virtue of its upset victory over Mt. St. Mary's (the Mounties only loss) will provide the only serious threat to the Mount. It is interesting to note, however, that Towson State defeated American U., and Loyola downed Towson quite handily.

Dark-Horse Challengers

The Mount will also provide the major challenge to Frampton. Frank Murphy of M. S. M. finished second to Rick last year, and he will probably be trying for an upset victory over his nemesis. Also of the Mount, Keeler, who finished 8th last year, Marzloff and McKee, are men to watch.

American U.'s main threat is their number one man, Ed Orem. Last season he finished 7th, and could do better tomorrow. Towson State has two very strong individuals in John Murphy and Don Masken. This pair finished 3rd and 4th in the last Invitational, and if they run true to form might repeat their performance.

From the D.C. schools, the strongest entry is probably Hennessey of C.U., with Buyas and Davidson, both of Gallaudet, running close behind him. The leading contender from Washington College is Linsey, who seems to have been the only shining light on the Washington squad.

Local Heroes

The men to watch from our own squad, in addition to Frampton, are Lew Smith, Hank McGraw, and Bill Jenkins. Lew, a senior and the team captain, will be running in his next to last race in Loyola livery. Both McGraw and Jenkins, who finished 11th last year, have been closing in on Smith and Frampton all season long and should have a good race.

Booters In Late Surge

The Greyhound booters have bounced back to go undefeated through their last three games, after losing their first seven contests. They topped Hopkins 1 to 0, Washington College 2 to 0, and tied Randolph-Macon 1 to 1.

Mike Elliot was the hero of the Hopkins game as he knocked in a goal in the fourth quarter to win the game for the Hounds. The Hound defense was especially outstanding in chalking up its first shutout of the year.

A Win & A Tie

The soccer team played host to Washington College on All Saints Day. The Shoremen arrived boosting an undefeated record in M.D. play. Carl Manfre and Joe Kosiorek changed this however, when each chipped in a goal in the third quarter to gain the victory for the Hounds. Kosiorek's goal was a real picture shot, as he headed a perfect center into the upper left hand corner of the nets.

Hounds Tie Yellowjackets

Last Friday the Greyhounds entertained Randolph-Macon College in one of the hardest-fought games of the season. Dennis Grabowski opened the scoring on a short kick off of a pass from John Kircher. A few minutes later, a windblown shot off the foot of a Yellowjacket eluded goalie, Paul Cashour for the tying score. Both teams battled evenly through the second half and two overtime periods, but the tie was not broken. The Hound defense of John Cambell, Mike Elliot, and Rick Cambell continually stopped Randolph-Macon shots.

Georgetown Today

This afternoon our booters will travel to Washington D.C. to do battle with Georgetown in the final game of the season. The Hounds will be hoping for a repeat performance of last year's game when they trounced Georgetown 6 to 1.

Sports Shorts

Harriers Successful

The Hound cross-country team has ended its dual meet season with a 5-1-1 record. The only team to defeat Loyola was Mount Saint Mary's, by the narrow margin of 26-30. The Hounds will have a chance to even the score with the Mounties in the Loyola Invitational, tomorrow afternoon when they will again meet.

Basketball Opener

The basketball opener is less than a month away. The Hound five will open on Saturday, December 2nd against Georgetown University in Washington. Last year, Georgetown downed Loyola by a 112-71 count.

Season Books

Be sure to stop in at the Athletic office to pick up your season basketball tickets. They are free for Loyola students who need only to show their registration cards. These tickets, however, do not cover the Loyola Invitational Tourney in Dec.
